Recent amendments to the New Zealand Child Support Act 1991 have resulted in increasingly negative consequences for a significant number of children and parents. We contend that as the legislation currently stands it fails to adequately address the individual circumstances of many parents. We believe there are changes which should be made to better provide for the interests of the children involved in the scheme.

We the undersigned respectfully request:

“That the House of Representatives recommend to the Government that it make urgent changes to the Child Support Act 1991, in particular to the formula assessment, to provide a more transparent and equitable result for parents and their children.”
